Fashion PAGES

Editor Alexandra Shulman sat atop the bar at Le Caprice to toast the first Vogue on Designers books to a crowd of 200. Christopher Kane whispered to one Vogue editor that, when his time came for a volume, he'd like her to write it, while former pupils of Judith Watt admired her vintage Schiaparelli coatdress. Penelope Tree - about to go on a late gap year - looked sublime, while Amy Witten's son Cassidy won the style stakes in his floppy bow tie. With cocktails by Belvedere and Veuve Clicquot, the books were thoroughly fêted.

CHILD BENEFIT

To lunch at the newly opened Brasserie Zédel, where hostess Christine d'Ornano, of Sisley, invited her friends to help donate towards the Kids Company's Heart Yard (a house where therapy can be offered to London's most vulnerable children) and announce a collaboration between Sisleya cream and Kids Co. After much fun and gossip, the ebullient Camila Batmanghelidjh gave a moving talk. Cheques were written and delicious food was eaten. Benefit for all.
